“It is incredibly important for us to have our headquarters directly on the Indianapolis Cultural Trail,” said Kären Haley, Indianapolis Cultural Trail executive director. “We are thrilled to be able to expand our headquarters and to establish a long-term home and welcoming community space in the heart of our city.”

The Indianapolis Cultural Trail headquarters expansion includes purchasing and renovating its current location and the adjacent building, doubling the square footage available for the headquarters. Additional outdoor space directly adjacent to the Cultural Trail will provide enhanced opportunities for the community, programming and volunteers.

The Cultural Trail is launching a $2 million fundraising campaign to support its vision for the future of the Cultural Trail's headquarters including increased operational and programming capacity and a welcoming location for Trail users. Jim and Jan Bisesi have made a lead gift to kick off the fundraising efforts.

In 2024, the Indianapolis Cultural Trail is adding two new miles to the internationally recognized linear park and started design on a new segment which will span the White River and connect to the expansion of White River State Park and Elanco's new innovation district. Additionally, in May the organization added 330 electric assist bikes to the Pacers Bikeshare program and launched IndyRides Free, a free annual pass program for Marion County residents.
